It is the history of life as it is ever springing into being, ever handed on from one individual to another, gathering the vigour of many ages. Men are not solitary units whose history must be a collection of independent chapters, but they are a long line of heirs, each generation of whom inherits the mental wealth of its predecessors, and may squander the treasures or may multiply them many times. Students of merely material organisms have begun in these later days to wonder whether the Creator's plan for filling this world with life may not include some law ordaining that one generation shall hand down to its successor a more highly developed material constitution than it received from its predecessor. Such a hypothesis is but a tardy reflection...
